Notes

- 1. The wording of this question is potentially confusing. The first Vice President (VP), John Adams, succeeded George Washington as the second US President in 1797. In turn Adams was followed by his own VP, Thomas Jefferson, as the third President in 1801. John Tyler was the fourth VP to become President, but was the first to do so without winning an election, following the death of William Harrison in 1841.
- 2. The question should have made it clear how specific an answer is required. The three main parts of the brain are the cerebrum, brainstem and cerebellum. The temporal lobe is part of the cerebrum, which is an equally acceptable answer. It might have been better to ask which of the four lobes is responsible.
- 3. If the shortened name of just "Red Cross" is an acceptable answer to Question 1 then it would not be unreasonable to accept just "United Nations/UN" as an answer to this question.
- 4. Japan has two national flowers, so 'chrysanthemum' is also an acceptable answer.
- 5. Botticelli's version is the best known of many paintings entitled The Birth of Venus. To rule out other equally correct answers (e.g. Fragonard, Poussin, Boucher etc) it would have been better to include additional information such as 'painted in the fifteenth century' or 'housed in the Uffizi Gallery'.
- 6. The correct name is Olivia Rodrigo. Also, Taylor Swift did not have a hit with this song. For Rodrigo's version Swift received a writing credit for an interpolation of her own song Cruel Summer.
- 7. Björk has been a member of several bands, of which the Sugarcubes is by far the best known. Other equally acceptable answers include Exodus, Tappi Tíkarrass, Jam-80 and Kukl.
